Post-War Program

AIRSHIPS

BY REAR ADM. T. G. W. SETTLE, USN
Chief of Naval Airship Training and Experimentation

AIRSHIPS are of two kinds, the small blimps and the large zeppelins. Both were used effectively by the major powers in the 1914-18 war; both had extensive and successful commercial utilization between the wars.

In the recent war the Navy built up its blimp arm from practically "scratch" to some 180 patrol, escort and training ships, of four classes. The medium displacement K class (comprising the preponderant number) operated in fleet squadrons on all our continental coasts, in the Caribbean, and in South American and western Mediterranean waters, in anti-submarine and mine tasks.

Rear Adm. Settle

One residual squadron of four operating blimps now remains in the Pacific Fleet and one in the Atlantic Fleet. Ships of these squadrons under ComAirPac and ComAirLant, (some operationally under Commander, Operational Development Force), are carrying on such fleet utility and operational development missions as their numbers permit.

The Naval Airship Training and Experimental Command, principally based at the Naval Air Station, Lakehurst, N. J., has eight operational airships, of three classes, assigned for training and basic experimentation and development. With the limited facilities available, important projects are in hand for the Chief of Naval Operations and the Bureau of Aeronautics, in collaboration with the Office of Naval Research, Bureau of Ships, Naval Research Laboratory, Taylor Model Basin, Humm Laboratory, and other agencies. Services are furnished, as practicable, for development projects of the Army and other Government departments.

As one of a series of scheduled flights for the augmentation of the sea-keeping and habitability features of airships, the XM-1 (20 tons displacement) remained underway for over a week, 170.3 hours, last fall, cruising off the Atlantic coast from Lakehurst to the Florida Straits, in the Gulf of Mexico to the vicinity of New Orleans, thence to the airship base at Glynn, Georgia. Upon landing the ship had 9% of her original fuel left on board; ship and crew were as fit as upon sailing. Some of the crew of 13 officers and men having gained weight. The ship had not been stripped and this flight was not planned as an attempt to set up an endurance record. It was, however, the longest time an aircraft of any type had remained in flight without replenishment, surpassing the previous record of 130 hours, set by a Russian airship in 1936.

Construction Program
For Army Posts Asked

A Program for construction at Army posts which will be included in the permanent post-war establishment was submitted to Congress this week by the War Department.

In a letter accompanying the draft bill, Secretary of War Robert Patterson stated that it would "authorize the Secretary of War to establish or develop military installations and facilities by the construction of specific public works at named installations in the continental United States including Alaska, and overseas possessions; and to acquire lands and rights pertaining thereto, or other interest therein, by donation, purchase, exchange or otherwise. The proposed legislation also authorizes appropriations with express monetary limitations to continue available until expended, and provides for the execution of continuing contracts to cover authorized construction when existing appropriations are not sufficient to cover the entire cost."

The bill would provide for construction at the following posts:

Autonomous Air Organization

Army Air Forces Headquarters, after long study of the organizational problems which would arise with the creation of an autonomous Air Force upon enactment of pending unification legislation, now has concrete and long-range plans for many important phases of the new organization.

For many months the AAF organization has been brought into line as a self-sufficient whole. Under the five staff sections of the headquarters organization are now operating an Air Inspector, Air Ordnance Officer, Air Quartermaster, Air Chemical Officer, Air Communications Officer, Air Engineer, Air Surgeon, Air Adjutant General, Air Chaplain, Air Judge Advocate, Air Provost Marshal and Air Finance Officer.

Enactment of the unification measure would find many officers of other branches assigned to the AAF. As of 30 April there was a total of 6,295 non-AAF officers so assigned.

Under current plans for an autonomous Air Force all such officers would, during a two-year interim period following enactment of the legislation, be transferred to the Air Forces or returned to their own basic branch, in the discretion of the Secretary of National Security.

Training plans for Air Forces personnel of the autonomous force call for training of Air personnel with the Army branches comparable with those of the Air organization. A steady flow of personnel with special skills would thus be maintained by the Air branch and at the same time duplication of training facilities, one of the goals of the unification measure, would be achieved.

Reduction of Colonels

A total of 640 temporary colonels were reduced to the grade of lieutenant colonel 1 July. These consisted of 588 Regular Army officers and 52 non-Regulars.

Officers affected by the reduction were notified individually by the various Army headquarters. Following individual notification the names will appear in War Department Special Orders.

The reduction was effected through the demotion of all Regular Army officers of the ground arms with the temporary grade of colonel who 1 July held permanent grades of captain and lieutenant. This included all officers of the ground arms originally commissioned as second lieutenants subsequent to 30 June 1930, and in the case of recently integrated Regular Army officers, those whose dates of rank as captain were later than 30 June 1940.

The 43 junior Air Corps officers of the Regular Army holding the temporary rank of colonel were demoted.

The non-Regular colonels demoted included all officers of the ground arms promoted to that grade after 1 Dec. 1944, and the last seven Air Corps officers promoted to the grade of colonel.

Non-Regular officers declining to accept the promotion are being relieved from active duty immediately, without prejudice.

The demotion did not include colonels in the Medical Department or Chaplains Corps, these branches having fewer colonels authorized on the basis of current strength.

Hearings on Promotion
Begin in Senate 9 July

Hearings on the Army and Navy promotion bill, HR 3830, are scheduled to begin in the Senate Committee on Armed Services next week.

Chairman Chan Gurney (R-SD) expects to bring the bill before the full Committee possibly on Wednesday, 9 July. The entire 13-man Committee will study the bill.

No limit has been set on the length of promotion hearings, Senator Gurney declared, because the bill merits the Committee's full consideration. He was unable to predict when the Committee might report the bill to the floor for Senate action.

"The House Committee did such a thorough job on promotion that it would seem that we might accept the bill with their amendments," he said. "But we'll go into it as completely as possible."

In order to work on bills considered "must" bills, the Committee will probably begin night meetings next week, Senator Gurney declared. The night sessions will include studies of the promotion bill.

"We recognize the urgent need for a promotion law," he asserted. "But I'm not certain this is the right bill."

Senate Committee staff members followed progress of the promotion bill through hearings before the House Personnel Subcommittee, and have studied the bill in detail since its passage by the House on 25 June.

They have also heard from the officers who explained Army and Navy promotion plans in the House. These include Brig. Gen. John E. Dahlquist, USA, Capt. Selman Bowling, USN, and Comdr. D. L. Martineau, USN.

Senator Gurney said the Committee on Armed Services will weigh heavily the recommendations of its staff members.

Promotion hearings are expected to begin with opening statements by Rear Adm. Thomas L. Sprague, USN, Chief of Naval Personnel, and General Dahlquist, head of the War Department Personnel Planning Board. They will explain the operation of the promotion systems in general terms.

They will be followed by detailed explanations to satisfy the desires of the Committee.

If the "Officer Personnel Act of 1947" is to become law before the Summer recess, the Senate will have to act on the bill in time to permit the House to vote again, either accepting Senate amendments now being prepared or sending the measure to conference.

Both the War and Navy Departments have continued to review the wording of each section of the bill, with a view toward achieving the clearest possible language. Portions of the bill were being rewritten this week to accord with the intent of the House.

The promotion act is listed by the Senate as one of several "must" bills which it hopes to push to enactment before the recess, now tentatively scheduled 26 July. Because of the thoroughness with which the House Personnel Subcommittee on Armed Services studied promotion, it is

Service Legislation

New York World Telegram—"The House of Representatives has voted to eliminate the five-star rank for the Army and Navy and to cut the number of four-star officers requested by the two services from 24 to 11. Both actions are penny foolish."

Washington News—"There is another cogent reason why we can well afford to carry some seemingly surplus rank on our peacetime rosters. It will help to offset the higher pay private enterprise can offer our outstanding military men."

Worcester Telegram—"The merger involves technical problems. Getting the military leaders to agree on this plan was something of an achievement. And the Senate is acting wisely in putting this measure on its program of legislation to be passed before Congress adjourns on 26 July."

New Orleans Times-Picayune—"Why a Congress which has shown its responsiveness to majority wishes and national needs in such matters as corrective labor legislation, shows reluctance to safeguard the nation against attack and the world's peace against another deadly breach, by enactment of the majority-indorsed plan for defense training, is a question for which the Congress leaders have given no satisfactory answer."

Atlanta Constitution—"While the Republican leadership in Congress has placed the Armed Services unification proposal at the top of measures they hope to pass before Congress adjourns, there appears little possibility that the Universal Military Training Bill will be acted upon at this session."

Washington Star—"The House Armed Services

Committee presumably felt that there is too much 'top brass' in both services as an aftermath of the war. But in moving to reduce this top-heaviness it unrealistically applied the same ceiling to services having different requirements with regard to rank."

St. Louis Star Times—"The best argument in support of universal training is that a strong reserve of disciplined personnel is an essential of the common-sense security program that world conditions dictate."

Duluth News-Tribune—"Universal military training will be unpopular with a good many people, even with some who know, in their hearts, that our national safety may depend upon it. It has been opposed by some powerful groups. This makes it tough for those congressmen who want to be re-elected, but it does not excuse them from making a decision based on facts and on the opinions of well-posted experts."

Strength in Family Unit

Strength in the "family unit" as the basis of National strength was stressed by Maj. Gen. Clark L. Ruffner, USA, member of the Secretary of War's Personnel Board, in addressing the graduating class at Charlotte Hall Military Academy 3 June.

In his address General Ruffner said:

"It is my firm conviction that a nation is only as strong as its 'family units' are strong. I think we all know and understand, at least to a fair degree, what we mean when we speak of national strength. I will, in passing, just briefly remark on it to this extent: To have national strength we must have strong and wise leadership; faith in God, our country and our leaders; natural resources; mobilization, including industrial and manpower; adequate and well developed roads, railroads and waterways; financial soundness; agricultural productivity; first-class communications; national morals; international trade; scientific research and development; and last but not least, good morale, which is insured by the preservation of our Bill of Rights."

"To prove my contention that we cannot have national strength without strong family units, I wish to point out a concrete example. It is Germany."

"Most of the elements just mentioned as a prerequisite to national strength were possessed by the German Nation prior to its entry into World War II. Let us reflect a moment, though, about what happened. In keeping with Germany's national trait and policy, that country started a highly intensive program to regiment young boys and girls were brought into the Youth Movement, where they were taught that all loyalty came first to the state; religion was pushed into the background; youths were turned against their parents, in many instances; old people were taken from their homes; the family unit, which among Germans prior to this time had been a keynote in their lives, was broken up, relegated to a very secondary position, to express it mildly, and replaced with a doctrine that the state came before the family or church. The end result we have all witnessed."

"The question might well be asked, 'How does a strong family unit, as such, necessarily insure national strength?' I believe it is because in the family, responsibility, teamwork, discipline, love, religion and self-sacrifice are first taught and emphasized. With your permission I would like to state an old cliché: 'One cannot run until he has first learned to walk.' The basic values of life which guide our thoughts and actions from the time we reach maturity are most apt to be taught in our formative periods spent in the family group. If there is no home presided over by loving, strict, but fair parents for the youth of our nation to return to after school or play, where they are made to wash up, do their part of the chores, study, feel the influence of righteousness and learn unselfishness in their dealings with their brothers, sisters and parents, then our nation will be unable to develop national character. One cannot 'run' with national responsibilities until he has learned to 'walk' with family responsibilities."

"It is a human weakness to lightly dismiss a failure by explaining the reasons or giving excuses for attainment of below standard or inferior results. Frequently these failures come to light at a time when corrective action cannot be initiated because the damage is irreparable. Beginning now, let us all, parents and children alike, no longer admit that automobiles, radios, airplanes, movies, night baseball, midget auto races, and other amusement centers have so diversified our interests that we can no longer hold the family unit together in the American way."

"Before passing on to my discussion of the duties and loyalty of the individual to our government institutions and processes, I would like to stress one more point. We refer frequently to our forefathers with pride and delight, pointing out their accomplishments coupled with their ability and willingness to suffer hardships during the early history of our nation. Their pioneer feats in settling the western part of the United States are well known. How they battled the Indians, overcame our prairies and deserts to expand to the West Coast and build homes for their families and cities for our nation are common knowledge. I wish to emphasize again, however, in each of these incidents we find the family unit as a whole participating in the development of our country. The responsibilities and obligations in each family today are the same as they were in the days of our forefathers."

Senate Committee Program

A tentative program, including the Service promotion bill, the Medical Pay increase bill, and the bills to make the WACS and WAVES permanent, has been mapped out for consideration this session by the Senate Committee on Armed Services.

The program was drafted after consultation with War and Navy Department leaders in which first priority was given to those bills urgently sought by the War Department, which have been endorsed by the Bureau of the Budget, and which have passed, or are slated for early passage, by the House.

The tentative schedule of hearings is as follows:

8 July—H.R. 3851 (S. 1197)—Medical Pay bill, and H.R. 3215 (S. 504) — Army-Navy Medical Service Corps bill.

9 July—Promotion.
10 July—H.R. 3051 (S. 1105)—Repeal Wilson-Trammell profit limitation act; H.R. 3390—Armed Services Leave Act (Mustered-out pay), and receive and act on S. 1174—Reserve Pay bill and S. 1196—ROTC.

15 July—H.R. 3471—Army-Navy stand-by plants; H.R. 3315—Conversion of naval vessels; Receive and act on sub-committee report on WACS and WAVES bills and on S. 1252—Chief of Naval Operations.

22 July—H.R. 3314—Navy Public Works; H.R. 3052 — Removal of financial limits on construction of quarters; and S. 230—Naval Academy Airfield.

C. of S. Tells State of Army

In urging restoration of funds to the War Department's appropriations for fiscal 1948, General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, USA, asserted on 28 June that the U. S. Army is a "poor second" to Russia's.

General Eisenhower told a Senate Appropriations subcommittee that of the House reduction of $435,000,000, the Senate should restore $375,000,000, and that another $103,000,000 should be added to cover increasing costs of new fighter planes.

The House cuts will "take us well into the danger zone" where the Army would lack strength to "pressure for peace" or defend the nation, he said.

"While the War Department's estimate of the situation for fiscal year 1948 does not include the probability of war, it does not entirely exclude such a possibility. I must, therefore, assess the capability of the United States Army to defend this country should war occur.

Salient portions of General Eisenhower's statement before the Senate Appropriations Committee follow:

"First I will give you my impression of the military posture of the United States during the coming fiscal year. While the War Department's estimate of the situation for fiscal year 1948 does not include the probability of war, it does not entirely exclude such a possibility. I must, therefore, assess the capability of the United States Army to defend this country should war occur.

"Relative to the armies of other world powers, I judge the United States Army to be second only to that of the Soviet Union. However, it is a poor second. Our Army is far from and thinly deployed about the world. It is composed, in the main, of young, inexperienced volunteers whose principal activity is not in the line of maneuvers and other forms of military training, but in the difficult duties connected with the occupation of former enemy areas.

"As a result of this weakness and sparseness of our forces the United States Army has a lessened influence toward deterring aggression. The interaction of world affairs still takes place in the shadow of military power. Those who count the existing military power of the United States can scarcely find it negligible, but they can hardly find it impressive.

"Therefore, the United States Army exerts today far less pressure for peace than it did when it was the world's most formidable fighting force. It is certainly apparent to every one that great pressure for peace is needed in today's world. I believe the present capability of the United States Army to exert such pressure should be weakened no further."

"These, then—men, materials, state of training, degree of modernization, strategic deployment, mobilization potential and morale—constitute the element of military power."

"In all, the House proposes to reduce the man power available to the War Department by 93,000 men. This total is obtained by adding the proposed reductions in officers, warrant officers, and civilians. I present the total to you in this manner to emphasize that, in general, man power is indivisible in the performance of the War Department's missions. The House action is not merely a reduction of officers, warrant officers and civilians. It is a reduction of 93,000 men. The War Department can ill afford the reductions imposed by the House on the strength of officers (17,000), of warrant officers (2,000), or of civilians (74,000). But even less can the War Department afford the over-all reduction in man power to which these individual reductions total—93,000.

"My staff and I have studied this matter exhaustively. We are able to accept a reduction of 32,000 in the category of civilians. We cannot, however, at the same time absorb the reduction of officers and warrant officers."

Officer Requirements

"Our requirement in officers was developed by no rule of thumb, ratio, percentage or any other such short-cut. Our requirement was based upon a careful study of the jobs to be done. I might add that when this requirement had been developed, it was cut again and again, both in the War Department and in the Bureau of the Budget. The effect of these cuts was such that when our estimate was submitted to the House it was already at a minimum."

Air Corps

"When I urge you to maintain a modern, effective Air Force, my mind is literally filled with examples of the bleak fate of those who failed to provide air superiority during the past war. I am sure that the importance of the air arm has been overwhelmingly demonstrated to all. The requirements of the Air Forces for the maintenance of a minimum degree of combat-readiness have been presented to you by General Hoyt Vandenberg. In addition to pay of civilian personnel, restoration of $29,500,000 is required for the materials and services needed to maintain the marginal degree on combat-readiness necessary during the fiscal year 1948. Over and above these requirements, you have received a request for $103,000,000 to provide more modern aircraft for the Air Forces.

"You are aware of the increasing costs of aircraft, and the other considerations, which prompt this request. I can only add my conviction that the provision of these aircraft is necessary to the national security. We are talking about our first line of defense; gentlemen—our first line of defense against attacks which might be brought to our homes and families. With all the emphasis at my command I urge you to keep that first line strong, modern and ready."

"As I said at the beginning, I can only give you my professional opinion regarding the national defense. Other considerations may lead you to take action different than that the Army recommends. If so, you can be assured that the men of the Army, in Europe, in the Orient and in the United States, will cheerfully execute your decisions to the limit of their ability."

Extra Pay for Mission Personnel

The bill formally reported this week by the House Committee on Armed Services to authorize the detail of U. S. military and naval missions to foreign governments also permits officers and enlisted men so detailed to receive full pay and allowances, and either additional pay from the foreign governments or "such additional compensation as may be determined by the Secretary of War, or the Secretary of the Navy, as the case may be, and approved by the President."

The authorization for officers and enlisted men detailed to these missions to accept additional pay from the U. S. Government is designed to cover the situation of missions assigned to governments which are financially incapable of providing adequate compensation.

General of the Army George C. Marshall, Secretary of State, told the Committee:

"It has been found necessary from past experience to arrange for the payment of additional compensation (either by the foreign government, or the United States Government, or both) to officers and enlisted men assigned to military or naval missions, not in order to favor the officers and enlisted men selected, but rather to compensate them for the considerable additional living costs involved in assignments to foreign posts. By thus assuring the personnel assigned to such missions of relief from financial hardships, the selection of the best qualified personnel, who might otherwise be reluctant to accept appointment, is also of course facilitated."

General Thomas T. Handy, USA, Deputy Chief of Staff, informed the Committee that the Army now has a total of 26 military and military aviation missions in 19 different foreign countries. Vice Adm. John L. McCrea, USN, Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Administration, said that in addition to the China mission, the Navy supports six naval missions in this hemisphere.

Terminal Leave Payment

With only the Treasury Department objecting to the legislation, the House Committee on Armed Services has reported H.R. 4017, legislation providing for the payment in cash of terminal leave bonds.

This will place enlisted personnel in a class with officers who according to present law receive terminal leave payment in cash rather than in bonds. The bonds now unredeemed will be redeemable after 1 Sept. 1947 and until 1 Sept. 1948. Accrued interest will be included in the payment.

Permanent WAVES Sought

The Navy Department this week resubmitted to Congress a request for legislation to make the Women's units of the Navy and Marine Corps part of the permanent establishment. The proposal was sent up last year but was not acted upon.

The proposed strength of the WAVES and Women Marines would be two percent of that of the enlisted strength of the Navy, with an officer strength of 10 percent of the corps.

Payment for Leave

The House Committee on Armed Services this week formally reported the bill to eliminate the granting of terminal leave on separation and to substitute a lump-sum payment of base pay plus longevity, but excluding allowances. The Leave Act would also be amended in other respects, as explained in the Committee's report as follows:

"The purpose of the proposed legislation is to amend the Armed Forces Leave Act of 1946, so as to eliminate the granting of terminal leave in conjunction with the separation of military personnel from the services and to provide in lieu thereof for a lump-sum payment of base pay plus longevity, but excluding allowances. In addition, the bill provides that enlisted men who are discharged and who reenlist in the services may, at their option, take a cash payment for accrued leave less allowances or transfer their accrued leave to their new enlistment. The bill also permits enlisted men who become commissioned or warrant officers to transfer their accrued leave to their new status as officers.

"Furthermore, the bill provides specifically for forfeiture of all unused leave for all members of the armed forces who are discharged for reasons other than honorable.

"An outstanding feature of the bill is a provision which permits the services to compensate those ex-servicemen who were discharged and immediately admitted into a veterans' hospital to receive payment for terminal leave to which they have heretofore been denied. Under existing law, there is no authority to grant such persons a lump-sum payment and thus such persons were deprived of their leave in the form of money; and because of their physical disabilities these persons were not capable of taking actual leave. As a result, they received no compensation whatsoever for accrued leave. Under the proposed bill such persons will be entitled to a lump-sum payment for unused leave up to 60 days, plus allowances. This feature of the bill is retroactive to 1 September 1946. Prior to that date, all leave was paid for in the form of bonds.

"In addition, the bill excludes cadets and midshipmen of the service academies from the provisions of the Armed Forces Leave Act. This merely enacts into law administrative regulations that are already in effect. Finally, the bill repeals the law which now permits commissioned personnel emergency leave at half pay in excess of their accrued leave. In lieu of that, the proposed bill permits all personnel to be granted emergency leave in excess of accrued leave without pay. This eliminates a previous discrimination against enlisted personnel."

Study in Private Industry

Declaring that "the experience gained from World War II emphasized the necessity of the closest teamwork between the military and naval establishments and private industry," the War and Navy Departments this week asked Congress to enact legislation authorizing the detail of its scientific and technical employees to tours of duty in privately owned plants and laboratories.

The detail would be for periods of not longer than 6 months at plants or laboratories agreeing to the plan, and employees thus detailed would be required to agree to remain with the War Department, Army, or Naval Establishment for 18 months after completion of this duty.

In commenting on the plan, Acting Secretary of the Navy Sullivan in an accompanying letter wrote:

"Only employees of demonstrated scientific and technical ability will be selected, and that no details to plants or laboratories will be made unless it appears that progress in the selected fields will be furthered thereby.

"The experience gained from World War II emphasized the necessity of the closest teamwork between the military and naval establishments and private industry. Scientific advances made in these establishments must be supplemented by progress made elsewhere, and the weapons based on the results of such advances must be largely provided by private industry. It is, therefore, imperative that the scientists and technicians employed in the military and naval establishments to develop new scientific discoveries and techniques keep in close touch with their application to the actual development and production of weapons by commercial establishments."

In another letter, Acting Secretary Sullivan asked for legislation "to create within the War and Navy Departments additional positions requiring the services of specially qualified scientific or professional personnel with annual rates of compensation for such positions ranging from a minimum of $10,000 per annum to a maximum of $15,000 per annum."

Operation Camid Renewed

Approximately 600 Cadets and 780 Midshipmen will participate next month in "Camid II," the second joint exercise for Service Academies in the art of amphibious warfare.

The exercises this year are divided into three phases. From 16-28 June, amphibious vessels assigned to the operation had two weeks of training and maneuvers in Chesapeake Bay. Rear Adm. Ralph O. Davis, USN, Commander Amphibious Force, U. S. Atlantic Fleet, is directing this year's Operation Camid.

After embarking a Battalion Landing Team of Marines of the famed Second Marine Division, who will serve as a demonstration landing force, the ships will engage in a two-weeks rehearsal from 14-30 July. Operation Camid will be conducted 11-27 Aug.

Prior to the actual operation, an extensive indoctrination course consisting of lectures and training films will be given the Cadets and Midshipmen. The Cadets will receive this training at the Naval Amphibious Training Command at Little Creek, Va., from 4-12 Aug., while the Midshipmen will be indoctrinated aboard aircraft carriers en route to Norfolk from Caribbean ports during the same period.

The Camids will witness and participate in landing exercises to be held at Little Creek and Camp Pendleton, Va. During the first landing at Little Creek, they will observe the Marines in an amphibious assault. For the second landing at Little Creek and the final landing at Camp Pendleton, the Cadets themselves will form the battalion with the Marines furnishing officers and non-commissioned officers. For all landings, Midshipmen will perform normal Naval functions assisted by Naval elements as required.

Gen. Eisenhower's Plans

General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, Chief of Staff, held a press conference 27 June to answer questions concerning his announced intention to accept the presidency of Columbia University.

"My interest in politics," General Eisenhower said, "in the future will be no greater, so far as I am personally concerned, than it has been in the past. I am taking a job that is, as far as I am concerned, removed from politics—personal politics."

Asked if he would actually resign from the Army, General Eisenhower answered:

"No; as a matter of fact, I am available for service, and I should say that in my understanding with my superiors I am committed by a gentlemen's agreement to come to Washington any day they say—any time—for any kind of consultation—any kind of work that I can do that is more definite rather than of the general character I have described. I am to be here when needed. I should also say the trustees of the Columbia University understand that."

Asked if that meant that he would be a retired officer, subject to recall to duty, General Eisenhower said:

"That I don't know as to what the final decision will be. It can be done in two ways, and either way they decide will be all right with me. If they want to, because of a special law passed in favor of several officers, they can put me on inactive duty, or they can retire me. It won't change me, as to my readiness to come back any time my voice may be wanted, as far as I am concerned."

At the close of the conference General

UNITED STATES ARMY

Eisenhower was asked to repeat his statement regarding politics. He did so, adding:

"I have no personal ambitions myself regarding politics."

Air Commands Shifted

New assignments for four general officers, were announced 1 July by Gen. Carl Spaatz, commanding general of the Army Air Forces.

Maj. Gen. Robert W. Harper was named commanding general of Air Transport Command, succeeding Maj. Gen. Robert M. Webster.

General Webster was given command of the First Air Force at Mitchel Field, N. Y., succeeding Maj. Gen. Robert W. Douglass, Jr.

General Douglass was assigned to the Air Training Command at Barksdale Field (Shreveport), Louisiana, succeeding Brig. Gen. Russell E. Randall, who will attend the National War College at Washington, D. C.

Col. Diller to U. S.

Tokyo—Col. LeGrande A. Diller, public relations officer for General MacArthur throughout the war in the Pacific and later secretary of his general staff, ended eight years of service in the Pacific 18 June when he left aboard the "General Hase" from Yokohama to command the 25th Infantry Regiment at Ft. Benning, Ga., beginning 15 Aug. His wife and son Richard, 15, accompanied him on the trip to San Francisco.

Please send in notice of change of address promptly.

AG School to Move

The Adjutant General's School at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., will move to Camp Lee, Va. The War Department announced that the move is designed to permit the accommodation of more students attending the Army Service Schools.

The new location at Camp Lee will provide more adequate facilities for the Adjutant General's School to meet the ever increasing demand for specialized military personnel. The move will also allow the three remaining schools at Carlisle Barracks to participate in a similar training development.

Enlisted Career Plan

President Truman this week signed the Army enlistment bill, paving the way for the Army's Enlisted Career Plan.

The bill sets standard enlistment terms, the former 18 month enlistment being halted. The indefinite term of enlistment set up under the bill will not be placed in effect until the full Enlisted Career Plan is in operation.

Noncommissioned officers have been requested by the War Department to comment on the plan and it was stated at the War Department this week that early returns are favorable.

Maj. Gen. Willard S. Paul, Director of Personnel and Administration, War Department General Staff, says that he feels that the Career Plan will bring into the peacetime a higher grade of personnel than ever before.

Gen. Thomas Heads FMFWesPac

Brig. Gen. Gerald C. Thomas, USMC, has been transferred from his post as Director of the Division of Plans and Policies, Headquarters Marine Corps, to become Commanding General of the Fleet Marine Force, Western Pacific.

At ceremonies in the Commandant's office last week, General Thomas was presented a Letter of Commendation from the Commandant in recognition of his excellent service as Plans and Policies Director for the past three and a half years. He has been relieved by Brig. Gen. Ray A. Robinson, USMC.

Comments on Army Bill

Following are some of the comments written to the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL by officers of the Army on the new promotion bill proposed by the War Department.

Copies of all comments and suggestions sent to the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL will be turned over to the members of the Senate Committee on Armed Services. These copies will contain no identification of the individual officers submitting them. The originals will be kept strictly confidential in the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL's offices.

Maj., AC: "Amend bill to allow integrated officers credit for active service prior to 7 Dec. 1941 (in my case 16 Sept. 1940). Retain time in grade for all except General Rank, and set up a more effective system of ridding ranks of incompetents."

Lt. Col., AFD: "By limiting credit to service after 7 Dec. 1941, the bill deprives some newly integrated officers of credit for actual service. Public Law 281—79th Congress—has the same limitation. In my own case, my permanent rank is two years below those officers commissioned in the Regular Army prior to 1945 who have the same length of service, and who, in many instances, hold lower temporary commissions. Although I have over twelve years' active commissioned federal service, I am credited with only ten years (age less 25). All my active duty was after I attained twenty-one years of age. Recommend the bill be amended to give credit for all active commissioned federal service, thereby placing all officers on an equal basis."

Lt. Col., Inf.: "While I favor a system of forced attrition where officers do not measure up to the requirements of the service, I oppose a system whereby officers who are capable and competent are forced out of the Army in their 50s. I feel that this is not to the best interest of the country despite the fact that it provides for more promotion of the younger officers. In addition, all active service in the Army, enlisted, commissioned, and service in full time accredited military institutions as cadets, should be considered for retirement purposes."

Maj., AC: "On the whole I favor the bill for promotion and elimination as drafted; however, many officers were sufficiently interested in Army service to apply for active duty prior to 7 Dec. 1941. Why should honorable service before that date be counted for promotion and retirement? Much of the groundwork for our future success was laid by Reserve Officers on active duty under the Emergency Act. This injustice should be corrected before the bill becomes law."

Lt. Col., IGD: "The bill as written would tear down morale, take away individual security, lead to formation of cliques, and create an Army of politicians. This bill gives no credit for temporary ranks attained and held for a period of years nor does it take into consideration responsibilities or duties performed during war. I favor the present system with temporary promotions for outstanding officers."

Col., CE: "Suggest it be amended to permit: a. Direct commission of Engineer officers in the Corps of Engineers to assure them a professional status and an engineering career. b. Separate promotion list for Engineer officers. c. No selection. d. The appointment of the chief and assistant chiefs of Engineers from among Engineer officers as at present, subject to confirmation by the Senate, and for fixed statutory terms of four years, or exempted from the provisions of the bill entirely. You already have received all the arguments against the bill, I shall not repeat them."

Cpl., TC: "My views might not have much bearing on the case, as I am an enlisted man, but I do favor such a bill. But what about an Enlisted Man who has all qualities of a good soldier but still a lowly corporal?"

Capt., Inf.: "Your entire future will depend on the opinion held by a superior who may not have liked the way you parted your hair in 1941. Apple polishing will become essential to existence. Troop duty will be shunned as the most likely spot to incur enemy. The Army is a life of service. Security is one of the few compensations. It's not a sufficiently good living to scramble for, as this bill would make necessary."

Lt.: "I am definitely opposed to the bill... as it doesn't reward or recognize the Warrent officer in any respect. Please voice my opinions to the committee anonymously as being opposed to the bill. Also—if any Band-leaders are to be commissioned, they all should be."

The Cadets are flying again!

AUGUST 1st is ARMY FORCE DAY—fortieth anniversary of the organization which leads the way in new things for aviation. This year's celebration serves as a reminder to young men everywhere that there is no finer way to begin a career in aviation than to join the Army Air Forces.

For example, if you want to learn to fly, you now have one of the finest opportunities to do so ever offered in peacetime. Aviation Cadet training has been reopened to qualified applicants presently serving enlistments in the Army, and to civilian young men who can meet the same high standards.

In order to be eligible, each applicant must be: a single male citizen, between 18 and 26½ years old, of excellent character and physically fit. He must have completed at least one-half the credits leading to a degree from an accredited college or university, or be able to pass a mental examination given by the Air Forces. He must now be living within the continental limits of the United States.

Upon successful completion of the training course, Cadets will be rated as pilots, commissioned Second Lieutenants, Army of the United States, and assigned to flying duty with the Army Air Forces.

Reactivation of Aviation Cadet training is only one of the several choices open to outstanding men who want increased responsibility and advancement in the field of aviation. It is also possible today for qualified men to apply for attendance at AAF Officer Candidate School.

You have a real chance to make progress and build a sound career for yourself in today's Regular Air Forces. Talk it over with your Recruiting Officer today. Any U. S. Army Recruiting Station can also furnish full details.

U. S. ARMY RECRUITING SERVICE

Would Shift Powers to Sec. Nav.

The Navy Department, after a survey made at the request of the Bureau of the Budget, has submitted to Congress proposed legislation that would amend existing law "so as to authorize the delegation to the Secretary of the Navy of certain discretionary powers vested in the President of the United States."

In a letter to the chairman of the Armed Services Committee, Secretary of the Navy Forrestal stated that there are no laws included in the proposal "that are impracticable to delegate for Constitutional reasons, that require action by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate or that are concerned with international relations."

The laws which would be amended by the proposed bill include those covering the following: retirement of officers upon the completion of 30 years' service; retirement upon completion of 40 years' service; retirement for disability from an incident of the service, or not from an incident of the service; removal of the charge of desertion from the records of personnel of the Navy and Marine Corps; and the furnishing of a statement concerning the percentage of fitted officers to be retained in the service.

Extend Life of Travel Orders

Authority for Naval officers to travel on outstanding repeated travel orders which terminated on 30 June has been extended, by Alnav 144, to terminate on 30 June 1948.

Such orders are to be endorsed by officers normally directing travel.

Adm. Byrd to Textile Firm

Comments on Navy Bill

The following comments on the Navy Department's proposed promotion bill have been received by the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL.

Copies of all comments and suggestions sent to the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL will be turned over to the members of the Senate and House Committee on Armed Services. These copies will contain no identification of the individual officers submitting them.

Comdr., CEC, USNR: "I oppose the bill as drafted. Promotion by selection without representation or recourse, by a 'jury' or a small minority of one's 'peers' is as vicious an evil as any against which we have fought our wars. No promotion or selection system can be adequate, complete or just until provision is made for the evaluation, by his associates and those under his command, of an officer's ability to 'get along with others'—and to 'handle personnel.' How, possibly, can the personal views of many, be expressed by a third, and generally somewhat remotely associated party?"

Lt. (SC) USN: "I favor the bill as drafted except paragraph 2. Suggestions: 1. Why not everyone get behind Representative Claude I. Baskwell (R-Mo.) in his proposed change to Public Law 305, so as to enable Temporary USN officers to draw pay in the Fleet Reserve at the scale of the highest commissioned rank held at 2 1/4% of base and longevity pay multiplied by the number of years active service, whose permanent status was Petty Officer first class and Chief Petty Officer, Permanent Appointment, and who have transferred, or who may hereafter transfer to the Fleet Reserve, instead of having to wait 10 more years until completion of 30 years before being retired in these ranks."

"2. If officers who transferred to the Regular Navy from Reserve or Temporary status could be credited with sufficient constructive service to bring their retired pay up to a par with an officer with 20 years' service because he failed of selection for promotion, according to the new bill as proposed (which I disagree with), then it is no more than right to retire the twenty-year temporary USN officer (LT) whose permanent status is Chief Petty Officer at the rate of 2 1/4% of his pay and longevity times the number of years of active service (which he has actually served) (not constructive service as proposed to give to the Lt. Comdr. who failed of selection for promotion just because transferred to permanent status from the Reserve or Temporary.)"

"3. Why must a man with 20 or more years of service, enlisted, warrant and commissioned combined whose permanent rate is Chief Petty Officer, and who is serving as a Temporary Lt. or Lt. (Jg) and who failed for selection to regular permanent commissioned status have to be transferred to the Fleet Reserve as a Chief Petty Officer with the pay $107.00 per mo.?"

"4. I would like to see a provision inserted to the new bill or go along with Representative Claude Baskwell (R-Mo) in his proposed change to S-1405, Public Law 305, whereby a Temporary USN officer, whose permanent status is Chief Petty Officer, could be retired and placed on the retired list after 20 years' service enlisted warrant and commissioned combined at the rate of 2 1/4% of base and longevity multiplied by the number of years' service for which entitled to credit in the computation of his active duty pay as provided under sec. 212 (a) (1)."

Honor John Paul Jones

Commodore John Paul Jones, naval hero of the American Revolution, the bicentennial of whose birth will be observed on 6 July, was the first member of the Naval Service to receive the Thanks of the Congress of the United States, the first to be awarded a medal by Congress, and the first to be decorated by a foreign government.

The following statement by President Truman was forwarded to the Navy Department by the White House:

"The daring and courage of John Paul Jones won for him immortality as an American. To recount his victories is to recall his love of this land of his adoption and his fervent devotion to the principles of freedom. Familiarity with the indomitable valour and heroic traditions which have their origin in the life of John Paul Jones should endow the American of today with a moral stamina necessary to meet the future with wisdom and with strength. We could not choose a more appropriate occasion than the bicentennial of his birth to rededicate our efforts to the furtherance of our democratic ideals and the preservation of a peace so dearly won."

John Paul Jones' victories at sea brought him awards from three nations: France, the United States, and Russia.

Airships

As with other types of weapons, the few airships now left in service are old, and obsolescent in design. They are good "work horses" with which to develop improved equipment and tactics, to keep pace with the stepped-up performance of submarines, surface types, and other aircraft. A modest and continuing new-construction program will, of course, be essential to long-view economy and national defense. There is the dangerous possibility, inherent with all components of our armed services, that short-view economy may necessitate a too-drastring, or elimination, of the airship building program.

Since the end of the war several commercial operators in this country have purchased surplus ex-Navy blimps from the War Assets Administration, and are getting into operation on a wider scale than obtained before the war. Commercial interests here are said to be studying the prospects for large (zeppelin) airship service on trans-oceanic trade routes. The Russians, from press items, are carrying on an airship development program, the details of which have not been announced. If the Navy's experimental and development program is carried to culmination the capabilities of the next classes of airships, big and small, will be considerably augmented.

U. S. COAST GUARD

AT the request of the State Department the Coast Guard will retain Merchant Marine Detail personnel in overseas ports to operate as they have in the past except for lack of authority to hold hearings.

The Commandant directed that Merchant Marine Detail personnel be located as follows:

Antwerp, Bremerhaven, Naples, Piraeus, Shanghai, and Trieste, one officer and one clerk each; and Le Havre and Manila, two officers and one clerk each.

In addition to limited vessel inspectional services, shipment and discharge of seamen, and licensing and certifying, the Merchant Marine Details performed related functions of marine casualty investigations, and investigations and hearings of acts of incompetency, misconduct, negligence, unskillfulness, or willful violation of law by licensed and certificated members of the Merchant Marine.

In keeping with the proposed operating plan for the fiscal year 1948, orders have been issued for the transfer of certain aircraft, now stationed outside the continental limits of the United States, to air stations for service or storage.

Plans have been discussed regarding the next semi-annual meeting of the Merchant

Marine Council to be held during the latter part of September. A tentative closing date of 15 July was set for receiving proposed changes in regulations, which are to be included in the agenda for this meeting.

Additional applications have been requested, in AlCoast 58, from qualified officers for a one-year course in Aerological Engineering at the Postgraduate School, Annapolis, and one-year course Applied Communications at the same location.

To determine retention in service and future structural changes and diesel installations, District Commanders have surveyed all 83-foot Cutters.

MELTING SCRAP LEAD from discarded telephone cable. It is smelted and refined at a Western Electric plant for reuse as cable sheathing.

He's cooking up telephone service

The salvaging of worn-out equipment has always been important in the telephone business. It's more important than ever right now.

For it isn't just so many pounds or tons of lead and copper and zinc and steel that come out of it. It's telephone service.

Every bit of recovered material helps to relieve shortages and enables us to build more of the telephone equipment that is so urgently needed.

That means better, quicker service for everyone. It also brings telephone service nearer to those who may have been waiting for a long time.

So salvaging is more than salvaging these days. It's the voice of a friend. A hurry-call to the doctor. A visit with someone in a distant city. Somebody's link with everything and everybody, everywhere.

OUR PRIORITY LIST

1. Establishment and protection of peace through maintenance in accordance with our National needs and international commitments, of Regular Establishments organized, equipped and trained to utilize and employ modern materials of war, and coordinated with Industry and Labor kept intimately familiar with the manufacture and supply of such materials.
2. Scientific research to keep our lead in the atom bomb, guided missiles and biological and radioactive agents, and development of methods for their use and for defense against them, plus effective safeguards in secrecy.
3. The building up of the National Guard and Reserve components of the Armed Forces to their Congress and State authorized post-war strengths. Federally equipped, housed, and trained, effectively coordinated with the Regular Services, and with Universal Military Training to maintain their strengths.
4. Protection of active and retired pay to meet risen costs so as to enable maintenance of American standards of living; relief from pay reduction though income taxes; increase in per diem travel allowances; compensation for Service personnel who use privately owned automobiles on government business.
5. Enactment, after ample opportunity for study and comment by Service personnel in the field and with the Fleet, of legislation for orderly promotion systems in the Regular Establishments with recognition of war service and war ranks to prevent stagnation, and to insure the maintenance of high professional standards.
6. Continuance and expansion of Service Schools, including the National War College, Army-Navy Staff College, and the Industrial College.
7. Rank and retirement benefits for former Army enlisted personnel and Warrant Officers who served in war on same basis now accorded those of the other Armed Forces.
8. Upward revision of pension scales to insure Service widows and dependents a living income.

THE Armed Services Committees of Congress have been busy this session considering proposals necessary for placing the Defense forces on a firm post-war basis and now, during these closing days of the first session, they are speeding up their programs to get as much of the "must" legislation enacted as possible. However, there is danger that the vitally important bill for retirements in the Regular Army may not be enacted unless special efforts are made to keep it moving along its legislative pathway. The House Committee has reported it out and Chairman Andrews is watching alertly for an opportunity to bring it up either on the unanimous consent calendar or under suspension of the rules. Falling in that he is planning to ask the Rules Committee for a special order for its consideration. There is little doubt but that the House will act favorably once the bill is brought formally before it. The difficulty comes in the Senate, where a similar measure was allowed to die in the last Congress after the House had passed it and the Senate Committee reported it out favorably. In drafting a program for the rest of this session the Senate Committee has omitted the retirement bill from its agenda, on the basis that it has not yet passed the House and that it has not been formally approved by the Bureau of the Budget. However, Senator Maybank and many other members of the Senate Committee are keenly aware of the importance of the measure and of the injustices and discriminations which will be perpetuated by failure to enact it and may be depended upon to insist that it be considered as soon as it comes over from the House. The retirement features of the bill merely extend to the Regular Army the same retirement rights given the Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard more than 18 months ago—the right to retirement with the rank of the highest grade in which they served satisfactorily in World War II and pay based thereon. It is inconceivable that Congress or the people would countenance perpetuation of a system whereby Army personnel are forced to revert to their lower permanent grades upon retirement, while all other Service men are retiring in the ranks they earned during the war. Yet unless special concern is given to the bill this discriminatory condition will continue. As the measure now stands, Regular Army warrant and enlisted personnel who served with distinction in grades as high as colonel will not be entitled to those grades and pay until they have served a total of 30 years' active and retired service, unless they are physically disabled. We urge the House to correct this inequality and to hasten the bill to the Senate so that its supporters there may have the basis to press for its consideration and enactment at this Session.

THERE is considerable satisfaction over the contemplated selection of Mr. James V. Forrestal, Secretary of Navy, to head the Department of National Defense under the unification plan Congress is expected to enact at this session. Mr. Forrestal will bring to that post a demonstrated skill in organization and administration, a thorough knowledge of the accomplishments of land, sea, and air power both in combined action and independently, and the imagination and flexibility of mind to apply the lessons of the past to the weapons of the future. Moreover his appointment as the first secretary of the new Department would assure Navy men that Sea Power would not be neglected in the new integrated organization. Further assurance that there will be sound naval advice and leadership in the new Department lies in the facts that Admiral Louis E. Denfeld is slated to succeed Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz as Chief of Naval Operations next December and that the latter has elected to remain on active duty where his vast experience in both naval and combined operations, as well as his characteristic consideration and tact in dealing with his own and other Services, will continue to be available. Admiral Denfeld's past service at sea as commander of destroyer divisions and squadrons, commander of the Support Force of the Atlantic Fleet, and now as Commander of the Pacific Fleet and U. S. Forces in the Pacific, his duty as Special Naval Observer in London, and his experience both in the Office of Naval Operations and as Chief of Naval Personnel give him that broad background so essential to a Chief of Operations in the proposed reorganization. Thus, on the recently observed anniversary of that turning point in the war—the Battle of Midway so brilliantly conducted by Admiral Nimitz—the Naval Service may be confident of sound and forceful leadership in whatever post-war organization Congress may decree for it.

Service Humor

Could Be

A GI who had grown tired of his farm life and had enlisted in the Army had all the fellows in his barracks amazed at his tall tales. One night he was a bit homesick, and he began to tell about the times when he was a farm boy back home.

"We have lots of black and white horses on the farm," he drawled, "but it's a funny thing. The white horses seem to eat more than the black ones."

"Why is that?" asked a gullible listener.

"Dunno," replied the soldier. "unless it's because there are more white ones than black ones."

—The Bealiner.

Unfair Competition

Irritated Professor—"Look here, young man! Are you the professor in this class?"

College Cut-Up—"No, sir. I'm not."

Professor—"Well, then, stop acting like a fool!"

—Andrews Field News.

Pseudonym

"I've got a pet pig—I call him Water-man."

"Is that his real name?"

"No, that's his pen name."

—Under the Hood.

Natch!

"Chief, there's a man here who says he used to make his living by sticking his right arm into a lion's mouth!"

"What's his name?"

"Lefty."

—Mather Field Wing Tips.

Tact at its Best

Marlene Dietrich had her picture taken and fumed at the result. "I can't understand it," she said. "The last time I posed for you, the photographs were heavenly."

"Ah, yes," sighed the camera man, "but you must remember that I was eight years younger then."

—The Pointer.

Worthless

—Camp Lee Traveller

Neat Trick

Th corporal was preparing to fingerprint the recruit.

"Wash your hands," he instructed.

"Both of them?" asked the soldier-to-be.

The corporal looked reflectively at the ceiling. "No," he said. "Just one. I want to see how you do it."

—Scott Field Broadcaster

W.M.B.—We have been advised by the War Department that the 14th Cav. Gp, 18th Cav. Ren Sq. which was attached to the 7th Armored Division has no foreign decorations or unit citations. Three battle stars are authorized for this organization.

J.J.S.—The War Department states that an officer being sent to an overseas assignment is entitled to a delay en route, except in cases when there is not sufficient time for this to be effected prior to the date of embarkation. A minimum of seven days is authorized; the authority for officers' leave is AR 600-115.

W.D.—AR 35-4810 authorizes travel pay to place of acceptance of enlistment or home for enlisted men at time of retirement. Mustering out pay is not authorized for service personnel at the time of retirement. The enlistment allowance is payable for bona fide enlistments and would not be paid to an enlisted man being retired.

A. J. G.—Under the provisions of PL 720, 70th Congress, all active Federal service in the Army of the United States, the Navy, the Marine Corps, the Coast Guard or any component thereof may be counted toward twenty year retirement (under this act) for either members of the Regular Army or members of the Regular Navy. Service required for this retirement is active Federal military service.

Gen. Lowe Westover Field CG

Brig. Gen. Thomas M. Lowe, former commander of Lowry Field, Denver, Colo., has assumed command of Westover Field, Mass., Air Transport Command's base for U. S.-Europe air travel. General Lowe succeeds Col. Malcolm Green, jr., who now heads the First Air Transport Group at Westover. Colonel Green replaced Col. John B. Henry, who is attending the Air University at Maxwell Field, Ala.

Deputy Air Chaplain Named

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) John J. Wood has been named Deputy Air Chaplain of the Army Air Forces. He succeeds Chaplain (Maj.) Alphonse V. Slivanski.

Chaplain Wood recently returned from Germany where he was Command Chaplain of the 12th Tactical Air Command. Chaplain Slivanski has been transferred to the Army Air Communications Service as Staff Chaplain.

Air ROTC Instructor

Lawson Field, Ft. Benning, Ga.—Capt. Robert C. Miller, chief forecaster and commanding officer of the weather detachment at Lawson Field, has been appointed weather instructor for Air ROTC students of the University of California.

ATC Atlantic Division

Important responsibilities were added to the activities of the Air Transport Command's Atlantic Division 1 July when it took over the program of the European Division. This economy merger already had resulted in the Atlantic Division assuming operational control of the European Division on 1 June.

Assumption of European activities adds to the already imposing list of achievements of the Atlantic Division, with headquarters at Ft. Totten, N. Y., and under the command of Maj. Gen. William H. Tunner, wartime India-China "Hump" commander.

Rhein-Main, near Frankfurt, Germany, will be the key center of ATC operations in Europe. Preliminary plans call for a weekly scheduled transport flight from Rhein-Main to Dhahran, Arabia. Maintenance and traffic functions will be the responsibility of a detachment of enlisted men and officers at Orly Field, Paris.

AAF-Boeing Contract Ended

Final papers have been signed terminating the B-29 production contract between the Boeing Aircraft Co. and the Army Air Forces.

The Boeing company, designer of the bomber, built 2,766—or 70 per cent—of the total of 3,970 produced during and immediately following the war.

Navy Orders Airborne Radars

The Bureau of Aeronautics has contracted for the purchase of 100 sets of a new type airborne radar for installation on transport planes of the Naval Air Transport Service. The contract, valued at approximately $1,000,000, is with the Houston Corporation, Los Angeles.

The new airborne radar set, which will provide pilots with positive safety and navigational checks when flying blind over hazardous terrain, was developed by the Navy in cooperation with the American Airlines. It is for exclusive use on transport aircraft.

Under present plans, all four-engine Navy transport planes will receive the new equipment, with deliveries expected to begin in early 1948. When the installation is completed, NATS planes will be equipped with the latest electronic aid yet developed for safe flying and navigation.

By use of the radar, the pilot will be able to "see" land masses up to 100 miles ahead of him. For terrain clearance a pencil-beam is used. This beam swings around the aircraft like a searchlight and, in effect, presents a safety circle in which the receipt of any echo indicates danger. When used with radar beacons, bearing and distances may be determined up to 225 miles.

Bikini Survey Group Leaves

The USS Chilton left San Diego 1 July for Bikini Atoll, where she will be floating headquarters for the scientific survey of the area in which two atomic bombs were exploded a year ago.

The Chilton will be joined at Pearl Harbor by the submarine rescue vessel, USS Concal. The task group will be completed in the Marshall Islands with the addition of a landing craft, the LCI 613. Capt. Thomas H. Hederman, USN, is task group commander.

The Chilton will drop anchor in Bikini on 15 July, the Navy said.

Payments on NSL Insurance

A decision by the Circuit Court Appeals, Seventh District (Chicago), in the case of Zazove vs. the United States, holds that the beneficiary of a National Service Life Insurance policy, if over 30 years of age, is entitled to a monthly installment equal to the face amount of the policy, plus interest, divided by 120.

This would materially increase payments to beneficiaries over 30 years of age. On a $10,000 policy the monthly payment would amount to approximately $86. It is understood that the Government is preparing an appeal to the Supreme Court.

dependability... A MARTIN REPUTATION MADE FAMOUS BY MEN WHO FLY

Pilots of our Military Services have been flying Martin aircraft since 1913. They are the men who made famous the Martin reputation for building dependable aircraft. They know Martin aircraft. And they know that for the past 34 years Martin has consistently produced dependable, advanced-design aircraft for our Military Services.

Now, great new Martin planes are on the way. For the Army Air Forces, the XB-48 . . . with six jet engines. For the Navy, the XP4M-1 . . . with two jet and two conventional engines. And the speedy new twin-engine Martin 2-0-2 airliners, whose design is ideal for conversion to military use.

Latest development in the more advanced field of rocketry is the Neptune, the first of 10 experimental rockets being built by Martin for the Navy. These huge 45-foot rockets are designed to make flights of more than 235 miles above the earth. They are the first all-American long-range missiles of supersonic speeds. Other studies and experiments include electronics . . . jet propulsion . . . trans-sonic speeds . . . plastics . . . materials and alloys . . . as well as advanced-design aircraft. Look to Martin Research for great advances in new scientific fields. THE GLENN L. MARTIN COMPANY, BALTIMORE 3, MARYLAND.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—In answer to the impatient inquiry from a Security Commission majority, the Military Staff Committee of United Nations, which has been holding meetings for over a year without major results, was required on Monday to submit recommendations, as to how large should be the UN basic armed force. The Russian member declined to make any report, in line with Delegate Gromyko's obdurate refusal to participate in an "impossible" task. There was no report from the committee as a whole, therefore, but separate reports from the American, French, and British members, with China concurring in the British report. The estimates, long awaited with curiosity and concern by members of all armed forces, are at wide variance. The U. S. report made by General Joseph T. McNarney calls for a UN total of 3,800 war planes (1,250 bombers, 2,250 fighters, 300 miscellaneous) and 20 divisions of ground force troops; the naval total would be 3 battleships, 6 carriers, 15 cruisers, 84 destroyers, 90 submarines. The British-Chinese recommendation is for 1,200 planes (600 bombers, 400 fighters, 200 miscellaneous) and 8 to 12 divisions; the naval total would be 2 battleships, 4 carriers, 6 cruisers, 24 destroyers, 48 escort vessels, 24 minesweepers, 12 submarines. The French proposal is for 1,275 planes (775 bombers, 300 fighters, 200 reconnaissance planes) and 16 divisions (3 armored, 3 airborne, 10 infantry); naval forces would be 3 battleships, 6 carriers, 9 cruisers, 18 to 24 destroyers and 30 escort vessels, 30 minesweepers, 12 submarines. These differences are not so far apart as to prevent compromise and acceptance; the important thing (while the veto exists) is that nothing approaching agreement is possible so long as Moscow holds to the view that "a decision on general principles" must be taken before the numbers of men and planes and ships in the common police force can be even discussed. What Mr. Gromyko regards as a "general principle" is that of absolute equality of contribution from all members. On that basis, if there was any battleship to be provided there would have to be five—one for each of the Big Five nations (unless Mr. Gromyko elects to state that there should be one battleship from each of the 55 member nations). The other nations more realistically hold that contributions should be on an equivalent rather than an equal basis, so that China, for example, might give so many thousand men rather than build a battleship for the sake of allotting it to the United Nations. In brief, this vital organ of United Nations, the military staff committee is still very far from initial and basic accord.

Soviet Russia's refusal at the Paris conference to cooperate with the western nations, even in order to qualify for economic aid from the United States, blocked the Franco-British effort to arrange for an all-Europe balance sheet of continental resources and needs and forced a new French effort to get Russian support in regenerating world economy. This balance sheet was regarded by Mr. Bevin and Mr. Bidault as a first step toward rehabilitation of Europe as a whole and of Britain and France in particular; until there should be a clear portrayal of what Europe needs, and what Europe is capable of doing for herself by cooperation there could be small prospect of aid from the United States. The Soviet declaration, on the other hand, (it is difficult to regard it as a genuine view) was that the first step was for America to itemize and formalize its offer, making a promise of precise donations before knowing what is needed or how it would be spent by the beneficiary; Mr. Molotov also opposed the idea of naming a committee which should assess European needs on a continental basis, his view seeming to be that no European nation should be required to assist another even for mutual regeneration. The Soviet attitude in brief continued to be obstructive rather than cooperative, despite the known desire of Poland, Czechoslovakia and others under the Moscow fist to take advantage of the financing opportunity suggested by the Marshall proposals. The fruit of this obstructive policy can hardly be anything save the setting-up of a survey committee from the free nations of Europe large and small, to do in those nations' behalf what it would have been far better to do in behalf of all Europe. If this procedure sets up a non-Russian community, as it will, nobody can be held responsible for that unfortunate division except Moscow itself which has deliberately cut itself off and sought at the same time to cut off all those unfortunate small nations which by proximity are dominated by Russia. It will be interesting to see whether Poland, for example, will in this case accept Russian domination and deprive herself of aid toward reconstruction. Czechoslovakia already has announced a desire to meet the American conditions. It is fairly obvious, in Moscow's tactics, that there is expectation of the Marshall proposal's failure, through inability of several western European nations to provide the degree of self-help which will persuade America to provide the large funds needed for effective rehabilitation. That Congressional approval and actual appropriations in the course of time are necessary to the plan's success, and that Congressional action has not yet been asked, was pointed out in these columns last week. It may be that Soviet opposition will actually predispose Congress to it, for Congress could well be so minded, as is unmistakably the case with a large part of the American public. On the other hand, America's financial ability to make these large contributions is dependent upon a normal national prosperity, and it must be recognized that Communist-bred strikes and slowdowns in American industry and Communist-encouraged divisions of American thought could seriously retard American industrial production and lower American prosperity. Industrial disorders do not have to be led by professing communists in order to serve communism's purposes, any more than our industrial strikes during the war had to be led by announced Nazi agents in order to serve Nazi purposes.

The "malicious distortion" with which Communist propagandists and sympathizers have discussed the Marshall program was denounced this week in extremely plain terms by Secretary of State Marshall in a Washington address. He avoided specific naming of Russia—and for that matter made no reference whatever to Henry Wallace—but denied the "imperialism" charges bandied about by pro-Moscow orators who have failed to note that America has contributed $9,000,000,000 to European recovery while Russia has been adding enormously to her own territories and controls. "Our armed strength was demobilized" the Secretary said. "No conditions were attached to its withdrawal (from Europe). No political parties subservient to United States interests have been left behind to attempt conquest of governments from within. No American agents have sought to dominate the police establishment of European countries. No 'Joint American-European companies' have been forced upon reluctant governments." It was hardly necessary for the speaker to name the nation which has done exactly those things.

A suggestion of the difficulty facing Governor Dwight Griswold and his colleagues on the Greek-aid commission is contained in a dispatch from Strasbourg where the French communists have been informed by the Greek communist leader, Porphyrogenis, that a "Free Greek Government" should be organized in northern Greece. It has long been apparent that the disorder in the north, which has been so troublesome to Greek rehabilitation and which is the fundamental reason for making military aid so large a component of the American relief fund, is artificially created by the Communists, aided by trans-border support. Porphyrogenis' ingenious statement, plus the disclosures lately made by the Ethridge commission before the United Nations, demonstrate that the troubles are chiefly of non-Greek origin.

UMT Program—Chances for the enactment of the administration's plan for Universal Military Training, at least for this session, suffered a serious set-back this week with the statement by Senator Robert A. Taft (R-Ohio) that he considers the proposal un-American, wasteful, and obsolete. As chairman of the Senate Majority Policy Committee, Senator Taft is in a position to prevent enactment of the measure while the calendar is crowded during the closing days of the session. It is possible, however, that both Republican and Democratic advocates of the plan may force consideration after prolonged debate in the next session.

Mr. Taft, in a press interview, was quoted as charging that the Army wants boys for 12 months training—so as to change their habits of thought "to make them soldiers, if you please, for the rest of their lives." He seemed particularly irked by "government propaganda" which he said was being secretly employed to secure enactment of UMT. As an alternative to UMT he proposed a volunteer summer program for 200,000 trainees.

Corps of Engineers—Lt. Gen. Raymond A. Wheeler, Chief of Engineers, left by plane 1 July to inspect flood fighting activities on the Missouri and Upper Mississippi River systems. His first stop will be St. Louis, where he will confer with Col. Clark Kittrell, head of the Upper Mississippi River Division, and Col. Rudolph E. Smyser, Jr., in charge of the St. Louis Engineer District.

From St. Louis, General Wheeler will fly along the course of the Missouri River to Omaha, Neb., landing there Tuesday afternoon to confer with Brig. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, Division Engineer of the Missouri River Division, and to attend an emergency meeting of the Missouri-River Ten-State Commission.

A pre-fabricated temporary Arctic shelter for troops, capable of providing an interior temperature of 70 degrees Fahrenheit while the outside thermometer registers 70 degrees below zero, and also capable of withstanding the impact of a 125-mile-an-hour wind, is being designed by the Corps of Engineers. Present plans call for a building light enough in weight to be transported by airplane or glider and so simple in construction that it can be erected quickly by unskilled men wearing arctic clothing, including gloves.

The office of the Division Engineer, South Pacific will be moved from San Francisco to Oakland, Calif., effective 8 July 1947. The office in San Francisco will be discontinued at midnight, 7 July and the Oakland office established one minute later.

New offices of the Division will be located in the Administration building, Oakland Army Base. They can be reached by automobile, bus or trains from Oakland, but from San Francisco only by Key System trains.

Col. Dwight F. Johns is Division Engineer of the South Pacific Division.

Bureau of Medicine and Surgery—Approximately 150 Medical Corps officers are receiving residency training in 16 major medical specialties at eight large Naval Hospitals throughout the country under the recently broadened graduate medical training program of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery.

The residency training, part of an overall program designed to increase the proficiency of Naval Medical Officers and to keep them abreast of current trends in medicine, is being carried out at Naval Hospitals at Great Lakes, St. Albans, Chelsea, Philadelphia, Bethesda, Long Beach, Oakland, and San Diego. In addition, several other Naval Hospitals are being utilized for training in obstetrics and gynecology, and Navy Medical Officers are receiving special and advanced training in civilian hospitals, schools, and institutions.

The Medical Department also has 98 Navy Nurses, 51 officers of the Hospital Corps, and 33 Dental Corps officers in training.

Vice Adm. Ross T. McIntire (MC), USN (Ret.), former Surgeon General of the Navy, has received the Legion of Honor with the grade of Officer from the French Government. Rear Adm. Charles "S" Stephenson (MC), USN (Ret.), has been awarded the Legion of Merit for his services as Medical Officer in Charge of the Division of Preventive Medicine in the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery and as Navy Medical Representative on the National Research Council from 8 Sept. 1939 to 24 Nov. 1942.

Marine Corps—The first half of the Platoon Leaders Course (junior course), which is being resumed this year for the first time since before the war, will begin at The Basic School, Quantico, on 7 July. Some 200 officers will comprise this training group, and will make up the 3d Battalion of The Basic School's Training Regiment.

These officers will be joined on 21 July by the second half of the Platoon Leaders Course, approximately 150 officers. The first half of the class will remain in training until 16 Aug., while the second half will not complete its session until 30 Aug.

The Platoon Leaders Course (senior course), consisting of some 50 officers having previous military experience, will arrive in Quantico 14 July to undergo training. Designated the 1st Battalion, the class will remain in training until 23 Aug.

Now undergoing summer training at The Basic School are three Midshipmen of the NROTC program, who will complete training there on 15 Aug., and 27 contract students, who will finish on 11 July.

Judge Advocate General's Department—The Legion of Merit (Oak Leaf Cluster) was presented to Col. B. Franklin Riter on Friday, 27 June, in a ceremony in the office of Maj. Gen. Thomas H. Green, The Judge Advocate General, who made the presentation. The award was made for Colonel Riter's services as a member of a Board of Review and co-ordinator of the Boards of Review in the Branch Office of The Judge Advocate General for the European Theater, from July 1944 to February 1946. Colonel Riter reported to the Separation Center at Ft. Myer, Va., on Monday, 30 June, for relief from active duty.

On 30 June General Green addressed the Washington Judge Advocates Chapter of the Reserve Officers Association, at their dinner meeting at the Continental Hotel.

Maj. Gen. Archer L. Lerch, Military Governor of Korea, now in Washington temporarily, called last week to visit with his former associates in the Judge Advocate General's Department.

Capt. Roderick F. Grieg has been recalled to active duty and ordered to JAGO from his home in Niagara Falls, New York.

Procurement and Distribution Division—Lt. Col. Stuart M. Welsh to Procurement and Distribution; Capt. Clifford A. Besecker to Supply Control Branch. Personnel and Training Division—Lt. Col. William T. Given, Assistant Chief, Personnel and Training Division; Maj. Joseph W. Carter to Signal Corps Career Management Branch. Army Communications Service Division—Maj. Leon F. Bugh to Communications Engineering Branch. Executive—Lt. Col. Francis L. Leva to Administrative Office as Assistant Executive.

Two unusual commendations came to Brig. Gen. W. O. Reeder, Deputy Chief Signal Officer, at the conclusion of the Signal Corps hearings on the Military Establishment Bill before a House Appropriations Sub-Committee. Representative John H. Kerr, (D-NC), said: "I have been sitting here for more than three hours listening to you and I have been interested every minute and every second of the time. It is the most comprehensive statement that I have ever heard before this committee." At the conclusion of the hearing, Representative Mahon, (D-Tex.), said: "I want to say that for the length of time I have served on the committee, nobody has ever made a finer presentation than you have. Your forthrightness and frankness and your complete grasp of your problem is very heartening, and I thank the Lord for men like you in the United States Army."

General Reeder was accompanied at the hearing by Col. K. B. Lawton, Director, Fiscal Division, and Mr. M. C. West, Deputy Director, who had prepared a comprehensive series of graphic charts covering Signal Corps activities.

Field Artillery—A battery trained to fire the Army's latest rockets is to be activated at Fort Sill, Okla., as a component unit of the Fifth Field Artillery Group.

Organization of Battery A of the 87th Rocket Field Artillery Battalion, with an authorized strength of six officers and 131 enlisted men, will be effected by 30 June. Brig. Gen. John Millikin, Commanding General, announced.

The remainder of the 87th Rocket Field Artillery Battalion will be stationed at the Anti-Aircraft and Guided Missiles Branch of the Artillery School at Fort Bliss, Tex.

National Guard—President Truman 27 June sent to the Senate for confirmation the name of Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, of Wethersfield, Conn., to succeed Maj. Gen. Butler B. Miltonberger, of North Platte, Neb., as chief of the National Guard Bureau. Subject to Senate action, General Cramer will assume his office this fall when General Miltonberger leaves active duty by reason of physical disability. General Cramer, who was assistant division commander of the 24th Infantry Division in the Pacific during the war, was given command of the 43rd Infantry Division last October on its reactivation as a part of the National Guard.

Approximately 80,000 National Guard troops will receive Summer training this year, the first such training held since 1940. General Jacob L. Devers, commanding general of the Army Ground Forces, has announced. It is estimated that 60,000 men will attend the regular 15-day training period which has been scheduled for all National Guard divisions and regimental combat teams which are self-sustaining in the field and able to muster at least 20 per cent of their table of organization strength. The other 20,000 men will attend special schools in lieu of field training. The field training program will be directed by Army commanders in the various state areas and will include individual and specialist training. Small unit training, through the platoon level, will be conducted when practicable. The school program will be administered by senior Army instructors and will also emphasize individual and specialist training.

Transportation Corps—Three troop transports of the Transportation Corps' post-war fleet will be re-named for Medal of Honor winners who lost their lives in World War II.

The vessels—currently being converted in West Coast shipyards to meet Army peacetime military needs—are The Private Elden H. Johnson (formerly the Pinkney); The Private William H. Thomas (formerly the Rixey); The Sergeant Charles E. Mower (formerly the Tryon). All three saw war service in the Pacific as Navy evacuation transports. They are the first units of the Army's postwar fleet to be completely converted for peacetime service and will be placed in operation on Pacific runs, with one of the three eventually to ply between New Orleans, La., and Caribbean ports.

Senate Promotion Hearing
likely that hearings in the Senate will last only a few days or a week.

If the amendments now being prepared are voted by the Senate, the bill will have to be returned to the House for their acceptance. Unless it is delayed by committee or floor debate on controversial provisions, the bill is expected to reach the floor of the House during the closing days of the First Session.

Drafting Amendments
The Navy Department was working this week to perfect the language in Section 412, authorizing advancement on the retired list for Naval officers specially commended for performance of duty in actual combat, and to bring Navy nurses within the scope of the Navy promotion system.

The original Act of 4 March 1925 (43 Stat. 1279) provided, in part:

"All officers of the Navy and Marine Corps who have been specially commended for their performance of duty in actual combat with the enemy during the World War, by the head of the executive department under whose jurisdiction such duty was performed, when retired by reason of age ineligibility for promotion, shall be placed on the retired list with the rank of the next higher grade and with three-fourths of the pay they would have received if not advanced in rank pursuant to this section."

The Senate Committee on Armed Services may require that this privilege be extended to officers of the Naval Reserve and Marine Corps Reserve. After some Reserve officers had been advanced on equal basis with Regulars, the Comptroller General ruled that the Act of 4 March 1925 did not apply to Reservists.

This provision, to which the Army has had nothing similar, entitles all officers coming under its provisions to three-fourths of the base and longevity pay in their highest permanent grade and to advancement on the retired list to the next higher grade than that in which serving at the time of retirement. This means that except for Captains having 30 years service, all officers coming under its provisions receive increases in retired pay.

The Personnel Subcommittee of the House decided to withdraw the Navy's authority under this section, and therefore amended the promotion bill to prohibit the advancement of officers after the date of enactment, and further to provide that officers recalled to active duty will be recalled in the grade in which serving at the time of retirement.

When the promotion bill came up before the House on 25 June, the House accepted an amendment proposed by Representative J. L. Whitten (D-Miss) authorizing the advancement of officers already commended. However, the bill as passed by the House also repeals the provision of the Act of 4 March 1925 authorizing this advancement, and this must be reenacted into law.

Interpreting the Whitten amendment, the Navy considers its intent to be that officers commended for performance of duty in actual combat during World War II may be advanced on the retired list, and therefore will propose to the Senate that this section be re-worded to permit advancement on the retired list for officers commended for acts performed prior to 31 Dec. 1946, the official end of hostilities. This will also serve to protect the interests of officers whose commendations are still pending.

Nurse Corps Provisions
The Navy is inserting provisions in the promotion bill to regulate the promotion of Nurses up to and including the grade of Lieutenant. Public Law 36, which established Nurse Corps as permanent components of the Army and Navy, left distribution in these grades undetermined.

Hearings on the promotion bill had already begun before the Nurse Corps bill was signed into law. The Nurses bill set maximum numbers of Lieutenant Colonels, Commanders, Majors, and Lieutenant Commanders, and provided for promotion of Army Nurses on a comparable basis with Army promotion list officers.

The Navy will propose that Navy Nurses be treated as other officers of the Staff Corps. They would be assigned running mates of like grade and seniority, and, following selection for promotion, would be promoted when their line running mates are promoted to fill vacancies in grade.

Navy Public Works
Extensive hearings on H. R. 3314, legislation authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to proceed with certain public works, have resulted in the bill being reported by the House Committee on Armed Services.

The complete program calls for an expenditure of $109,685,800 on projects within the United States and $139,769,400 outside the United States. The present authorization calls for an expenditure of $67,300,000 in the U. S. and $60,500,000 outside this country.

Included in the bill is authority for the airfield at Annapolis, and the purchase of property at Monterey, Calif., for the construction of the Postgraduate School for the Navy.

Stricken from the bill are projects to construct a wind-tunnel at Laurel, Md., as this facility is to be provided elsewhere, and the securing of some land on the Island of Oahu, T. H., for ammunition storage purposes, the intention being to give the latter project more study.

Weddings and Engagements

MAJ. Gen. H. K. Loughry, USA, Ret., Governor of the Soldiers' Home in Washington, and Mrs. John W. Craddock, widow of Mr. Craddock of Lynchburg, Va., were united in marriage Saturday evening 28 June at a ceremony performed by the Rev. Arlington McCallum in the Chapel at Soldiers' Home at six o'clock, with a small reception following at the Governor's Mansion in the Home grounds.

The bride wore a gown of bois de rose silk with blending accessories and an orchid corsage and was attended by her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Craddock, in a frock of powder blue crepe.

Gen. Loughry's daughter, Mrs. John W. Walker, Jr., wife of Major Walker stationed at College Station, Tex., came East for the marriage. Others witnessing the ceremony included Mrs. Samuel G. Harriess of Lynchburg, the bride's mother, and her two sons, John and William Wood Craddock, and her brothers, Samuel H. Harriess, Jr., and Harvey Wood Harriess of Lynchburg, and Mrs. Carter Glass, Jr.

General and Mrs. Loughry are spending their honeymoon in Canada and will return to Washington 1 Aug. and be at the Soldiers' Home.

The marriage of Miss Katherine Emilie Baehr, daughter of Brig. Gen. Carl A. Baehr, USA, Ret., and Mrs. Baehr to Lt. Col. Lawrence Robert St. John, CE, USA, took place 25 June at four thirty o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, 255 Irvine Road, Lexington, Ky.

The ceremony, which was witnessed by members of the two immediate families, was performed by the Rev. H. W. Alexander, former service Chaplain.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white marquisette, made with fitted bodice and sweetheart neckline. Her tulle veil was attached to a coronet of duchess lace which had been worn by her maternal grandmother and her mother. She carried a bouquet of white carnations, stock and blue delphinium.

Miss Betty Baehr was maid of honor for her sister. The bridegroom, son of Mrs. Walter R. St. John of Indianapolis and the late Mr. St. John, had for his best man Col. Thomas Jefferson Johnson (Ret.) of Versailles, Ky.

A small reception followed the ceremony. The cake was cut with two sabers—the first slice with the saber of her father and the second with the saber of her husband.

The bride was graduated from the Oklahoma College for Women and post-graduated from George Washington University, Washington, D. C. During the war she served as a Laboratory Technician at McCloskey General Hospital, Temple, Tex.

The bridegroom is a graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, Class of 1935. He served for three years in the Pacific Theatre, participating in operations in New Guinea and Luzon.

After a motor trip through the Lake Region of upper New York, the couple will make their home in Washington, D. C., where the bridegroom will be on duty in the office of the Chief of Engineers.

Col. and Mrs. Harry L. Barrett announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Barbara Ann Barrett, to Capt. Earl Edward DeMun, AC, USA, at a cocktail party, 27 June at the home of Col. and Mrs. Harry L. Barrett of Fort Slocum. The couple plan to wed in Sept.

Miss Barrett, a Delta Gamma at the University of Oregon, received her earlier education at the French Convent in Tientsin, China, where her father was stationed with the U. S. 15th Infantry Regiment between 1935 and 1938. She recently completed a course of study in sculpturing under William Zorach of New York.

He has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, and the Air Medal with 11 Oak Leaf Clusters. He has recently graduated from the Air Tactical School, and is presently stationed at Mitchel Field.

The marriage of Miss Barbara Gwynn Craig, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Louis A. Craig to Lt. Col. William J. Boyle, USMA, '39, was solemnized at a Nuptial Mass at Post Chapel #1, Fort Sheridan, Ill., by the Rev. James D. Gleason on 21 June.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore an ivory satin gown and her long tulle veil was attached to a Juliet cap of satin and orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white orchids and stephanotis.

Miss Faith Craig was her maid of honor, and Miss Constance Craig, her other sister, was bridesmaid. Cadet Francis Craig acted as best man and Capt. Francis Grogan was groomsman. Michael Craig served as acolyte at the Mass.

The bride and groom went immediately after the ceremony, on the traditional calisson ride around the Post.

A reception was held at the quarters of the bride's parents after the wedding ceremony, and the bride's cake was cut with the groom's saber.

U. S. Warships Visit Abroad

A squadron of 11 U. S. Navy warships, carrying Midshipmen of the Naval Academy on the first post-war Summer training cruise to European waters, docked in Scandinavian ports over the Fourth of July weekend.

Two battleships, two aircraft carriers, six destroyers, and an auxiliary split up for visits to Oslo, Goeteborg, and Copenhagen. Admiral Richard L. Conolly, USN, commander of U. S. Naval Forces in the Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean, is on board the battleship USS New Jersey.

Other vessels on the Midshipmen cruise are the USS Wisconsin, the carriers Kearsarge and Randolph, destroyers Beatty, Cone, Hugh Purvis, Stribling, O'Hare, and Meredith, and the USS Fort Mandan, LSD-21.

After a week in port in Rosyth, Scotland, near Edinburgh, the squadron sailed on 28 June, and on making contact with 11 ships of the British Home Fleet exchanged honors. The Duke of York, one of Britain's newest and largest battleships, led the Royal Navy column.

Gen. Eisenhower To Be Quizzed

Unless there is a change of opinion on the part of members of the House Committee on Armed Services, General Eisenhower, Chief of Staff, will be asked next week to clarify and elaborate his recent statement comparing the military strength of the United States and Russia.

Members of the committee want further details on his statement that the United States has only 2 1/2 Divisions out of 1,070,000 troops that are ready for combat duty.

USS Nevada Under Study

Pearl Harbor—The battleship USS Nevada, orange-painted battleship target ship for the first atom bomb test at Bikini, arrived here 26 June for an exhaustive radiological examination following a 2120-mile tow from Kwajalein.

The Nevada is the last ship scheduled for radiological examination here. She joins the USS New York, the only other battleship here that participated in the Bikini tests.

Financial Digest

According to the latest national summary of business conditions released by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve Board, based upon statistics for May and the first half of June, output and employment at factories showed further slight declines in May. Employment in the economy as a whole, however, increased seasonally. Value of retail trade in May and the early part of June was at earlier record levels. The general index of wholesale prices advanced slightly after the early part of May, with widely varying changes for individual commodities.

Production of manufactured goods showed a further slight decline in May, while output of minerals increased considerably, and the Board's preliminary seasonally adjusted index of industrial production was maintained at the April rate of 186 per cent of the 1935-39 average.

Manufacturing employment continued to decline somewhat in May, owing mainly to production curtailments in various industries, while employment in most other types of non-agricultural establishments increased somewhat.

Construction contract awards were about 12 per cent higher in May than in April, owing chiefly to a sharp rise in public awards.

Department store sales increased in May and the Board's seasonally adjusted index rose from a level of about 275 in March and April to 290 per cent of the 1935-39 average, equaling the all-time high reached in August 1946.

The general level of wholesale commodity prices increased slightly from the beginning of May to the third week of June, reflecting chiefly increases in prices of cotton, corn, cattle and beef.

MERCHANT MARINE

Merchant Marine

Vice Adm. W. W. Smith, USN (Ret), chairman of the Maritime Commission, has recommended creation of an Academic Advisory Board at the U. S. Merchant Marine Academy for the purpose of examining courses of instruction and advising the Superintendent on them.

A bill authorizing such a Board, HR 3672, was reported favorably last week by the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. A similar body, consisting of seven persons of distinction in the field of education, was authorized in 1937 for the Coast Guard Academy.

The bill provides that the Academic Advisory Board would serve without pay, but would have their expenses paid when visiting the Merchant Marine Academy, as would be required at least once a year. The Academic Advisory Board would be unofficial, and would have no formal connection with the Board of Visitors.

"From a long range point of view," Admiral Smith wrote the Committee, "the creation of such a board would be of great benefit to the Merchant Marine Academy as a permanent Federal Service Academy."

The Commission has announced that the next semi-annual examination for appointment as Cadet-Midshipmen in the Merchant Marine Corps will be held 3 Nov. and that applications should be addressed to the Supervisor, U. S. Merchant Marine Cadet Corps, Training Division, Maritime Commission.

The four-year course at the Merchant Marine Academy, Kings Point, N. Y., consists of three years at the Academy and one year at sea aboard merchant or training ships. Graduates are awarded Bachelor of Science degrees, are qualified for licenses as Deck or Engineer officers of the U. S. Merchant Marine, and are commissioned as Ensign, USNR.

The New British Army

BY RONALD OGDEN

Ex-Captain in the Green Howards Regiment, who was attached to the 8th Army during World War II

THE changes which are being made in Britain's Army, and which are associated chiefly with the name of Field-Marshal Lord Montgomery, fall into three main categories: the first changes affect the soldier as a personality; the second affect his training; and the third changes affect the whole organization of the Army as a fighting unit and a collection of individual units.

Let us start by considering the effect on the soldier as a personality. Many years ago the soldier was looked upon as a machine whose business was merely to respond to orders, driven on by the fear of punishment if he failed to do so. "Their's not to reason why, their's but to do and die..." as Tennyson wrote of them. Two factors have changed the situation fundamentally.

World War I brought to the British Army a large influx of civilians, most of whom had benefited by the great improvements in public and private education. The same thing happened in World War II. The Army authorities realized that, to get the best out of them, these men must be treated not as machines but as human beings. It became an axiom in the Army that the personal welfare of the men under his command was the first consideration of an officer. Moreover, instead of being mere blind participants in strategic movements of which they knew nothing, Field-Marshal Montgomery and other commanders, during World War II, made it a rule that every soldier, however humble his position, should not only know exactly what he was doing but why he was doing it. Thus he was to feel that he was actively cooperating with the commander and not merely following blindly into battle. This was a tremendous factor in raising morale, and was not the least of many factors which contributed to Montgomery's success in turning the appalling disaster of the retreat to El Alamein into one of the greatest victories in history.

Civilian Consideration

The second important factor in changing the personal status of the soldier has been the great increase in the mechanical and technical instruments of war. Many of the devices of war today require a great deal of technical skill to handle them. Obviously, the Army requires men of intelligence and general ability to handle them. The wireless engineer, the skilled mechanic, the motor expert, the linguist and the business clerk all have their place in the modern Army. It is for this reason that Field-Marshal Montgomery has suggested that drastic changes should be made in the treatment of the soldier and that he should be given at least a reasonable measure of those comforts which he would expect to find in civilian life. A good man deserves decent treatment and Montgomery wishes to attract the right sort of man into the British Army. A soldier should be respected as a personality and be encouraged to respect himself. Thus he is to be given far greater freedom than formerly. Provided he is on parade in the morning, he will be allowed to stay out all night. He will not have his lights switched out by a sergeant but will have his own bedside lamp and switch it out when he wants to. He will not have to parade before the Medical Officer when he is ill but will be visited by him in his own quarters. He will have sheets to sleep in like an officer, good food, recreation and educational facilities.

The other two main categories of reform deal chiefly with Army organization. Hitherto the British Army has been built on a geographical system. That is to say, each locality contributed its quota of men through its local regiments. In peacetime each regiment generally kept two regular battalions up to strength. In turn, these were sent overseas on active service. In addition a number of battalions of "amateur" soldiers was kept going for training purposes. These men, belonging to what was known as the Territorial Army, put in so many days a year in training as soldiers and attending camps, while carrying on their ordinary business as civilians. Like all of Britain's fighting men, they were volunteers. A civilian could belong to the Territorial Army, or not belong, as he liked.

Peacetime Conscription

Now a change has been made. The policy of conscription in peacetime has been adopted by the British Government. At the same time the Army, as we have seen, has become more specialized than ever before, and by the side of the infantry regiments have grown up a number of specialized corps. These include the engineers, signallers, service units, tank men, reconnaissance men and many others. The Royal Regiment of Artillery was in the same position as the corps, in that it served the Army as a whole. Nevertheless these corps had their Territorial Army units which were attached to the infantry units in their own locality and formed a basis on which to build up a wartime Army. Today this organization is being largely swept away, and a new, more flexible system brought into operation.

The Regimental system with its great traditions and fighting records will still be retained as a feature of Britain's post-war Army, but it is now proposed to dispose the regiments in 15 separate Groups based on territorial or traditional affinities, and to make the Group the unit, in place of the regiment, for the purpose of enlistment.

Training of Officers

An ultimate reduction in the number of infantry battalions is also envisaged. A certain number of regular battalions will be placed temporarily in "suspended animation" in a reserve category with no officers or men borne in their establishments. But from time to time changes will be made in this reserve category to coincide with reliefs of battalions from overseas stations.

Pre-war Infantry Regimental Depots will be incorporated in Primary Training Centers, where all British Army recruits will receive their first six weeks' basic training. During this period the recruit will pass through personnel selection tests to determine his general intelligence grading, and, in the case of non-regular enlistments only, the Arm of the Service for which he is most suited. Recruits will then pass on to the Corps Training Center of the Arm of the Service for which they have been selected, and to complete their training.

A word remains to be said about the training of officers. Obviously, in any Army requiring a high standard of intelligence and character, the training of good officers assumes the greatest importance. Hitherto regular officers have been trained either at Sandhurst or Woolwich. Sandhurst trained officers for the infantry while at Woolwich they were trained for the Royal Artillery, the Royal Engineers and the Royal Signals. Now it has been decided to amalgamate the two in the Royal Military Academy.

USAFIK Manpower Board

Hq., XXIV Corps, Seoul, Korea—A USAFIK Manpower Board has been appointed here to survey USAFIK and its major commands to eliminate any non-essential activities or overlapping functions. The Board will submit recommendation to Lt. Gen. John R. Hodge, Commanding General of the U. S. Army Forces in Korea.

The senior board member is Col. Joseph H. Rustemeyer, USAFIK Deputy Chief of Staff. Others on the board are Lt. Col. Malcom F. Gilchrist, Jr., XXIV Corps G-1; Lt. Col. Jeff S. Henderson, Director of Civilian Personnel; John T. Schudling, USAMGIK G-1, and Albert Martin, Classification Analyst of Officers and Civilian Personnel Section, XXIV Corps.

Under Sect'y Speaks at C & GSC

Under Secretary of War Royall, addressing the graduating class of the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., 3 July, warned that the Armed Services must keep themselves attuned to changing conditions and new concepts. They must appraise the future of warfare, he said, and devise methods to meet the new problems of that future.

Speaking of the necessity of planning for home defense, Secretary Royall said: "The scope and nature of another conflict may require that our strategic plans envision operations not only in every other corner of the globe, but also here in our own homeland. We must prepare for the possibility of destroyed cities and countryside—and disabled manufacturing and commerce—all stemming from direct enemy action."

Get Your Comments Before The Senate!

The returns from the Survey of each Service will be presented to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate which will soon begin consideration of the House bill. However, in no case will the names of those sending in their views be made known to anyone other than those members of the Army and Navy Journal staff who will do the actual tabulating, and recopying of comments.

"UNITED STATES AT WAR"

• A limited number of copies of the Army and Navy Journal's historic volumes, "United States at War" are now available. This series, the first volume of which was published 7 December 1942 with succeeding volumes each year until the War's end, forms a complete history of World War II in authoritative articles written by those Military, Naval and civilian leaders actually in charge of the operations in the active theatres and at home. Profusely illustrated, they merit a place in every well balanced library.

A small number of each of the four volumes is ready for distribution at $3.00 per copy in paper binding and $5.00 in cloth binding. (Volume I is available only in paper binding.)

Rejects Cemetery Costs

War Department requests for $1,523,600 for cemeteries in Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and Juneau, Alaska, were rejected this week by Representative Engel (R-Mich.), chairman of the Subcommittee on War Department Appropriations, on the ground that they are unauthorized and that the estimates are "outrageously high."

In a letter to Secretary Patterson, Mr. Engel said:

"These estimates seem to me to be outrageously high. When you pay as high as $7,600 an acre for topsoiling, $7,000 for a flagpole, $50,000 for a superintendent's lodge, office, and comfort rooms in a little 6-acre cemetery, $50 a foot for permanent fencing, $4 a foot for temporary fencing, $14,000 for a comparatively small temporary shed-type utility building, and add 15 per cent engineering overhead and supervision, $600 an acre for land in Puerto Rico, I believe you are going beyond all reason, and these expenditures are not justified not even for the cemeteries for our war dead."

"If a private group, incorporated or otherwise, presented Congress with a claim for cemetery costs such as these they would be accused of racketeering. It is up to the War Department to obtain authorization for this appropriation from the proper legislative committee and bring their costs somewhere down to earth."

"Ole Miss" To Be Gunnery Ship

The battleship USS Mississippi, veteran of both World Wars, is undergoing extensive armament modifications at the Naval Shipyard, Norfolk, preparatory to becoming the Navy's newest gunnery development ship. She will replace the USS Wyoming.

After the armament work is completed in August, the Mississippi will service test the Navy's newest weapons and ordnance equipment. Particularly qualified personnel will be assigned to the ship, and will be rotated from time to time in order to give a large group experience in the latest shipboard ordnance developments.

The Wyoming, which fired more rounds of anti-aircraft ammunition during World War II than any other Naval vessel despite the fact she did not leave Chesapeake Bay, is to be scrapped, the Navy announced. As gunnery training ship, the Wyoming provided gunnery training for 35,000 officers and men.

Once the flagship of the U. S. Atlantic Fleet, she will be disposed of in late Summer or early Fall.

The Navy announced that the modification work aboard the Mississippi includes the installation of:

"One six-inch double purpose turret, the new rapid-fire antiaircraft mount which is highly mechanized from ammunition handling room to gun muzzle. This improved gun will replace the usual five-inch antiaircraft batteries, in a new light cruiser class of which the USS Worcester and USS Roanoke are now under construction.

"Two new five-inch twin mounts, the light mount similar to but improved over the five-inch single mounts installed on large carriers of the CVB Class, such as the USS Franklin D. Roosevelt and the USS Midway. The firing rate is greater and is maintained at all angles of elevation; in former designs it became less as the gun elevation was increased.

"Various numbers of the newest intermediate caliber rapid-fire guns, including the vastly improved three-inch 50 caliber gun which has twice the firing rate of the old three-inch 50 caliber mount. It is expected that they will replace the 40mm antiaircraft gun if tests prove their expected superiority.

"The newest development in fire control equipment, including new type gun directors. "In addition, standard five-inch antiaircraft mounts will be installed and space has been reserved for future new developments and for missile launchers if required."
